THE MIES PROJECT – ARINA DÄHNICK

On the occasion of the reopening of The Neue Nationalgalerie after five years of renovation by David Chipperfield Architects (DCA), The Guardini Galerie opens the new season with the sensational architectural portraits of photographer Arina Dähnck entitled The MIES Project. It is the special photographic gaze that brings to life the characterful grand buildings of architect Mies van der Rohe from Berlin, to Brno, Barcelona and New York, to Chicago, full of poetry. The shifting between inside and outside, the connection of the city with nature. As a photographer, Arina Dähnck interrogates the facades and interiors, the work and living spaces of those icons of modernist architecture. Here, light and reflection, mirroring and the intertwining of the different spheres play an important role. The intellectual discourses of architectural theory of the time – such as the connection with Romano Guardini's thoughts on the city and nature – or the new questions to be asked about the sustainability of architecture and artistic ideas – are also brought back to resonance in a panel discussion with the monument-experienced Martin Reichert, partner in Chipperfield's office, and the architectural historian and publicist Jürgen Tietz, as well as in an artist talk with Joachim Jäger, director of The Neue Nationalgalerie.
